

YOUR NEXT JOB: CONSIDER WORKING ABROAD

Why search for a job abroad ?

Give an International or European dimension to your career in order to:

- Improve your skills (both personal and professional);
- Develop mobility, adaptability and autonomy competences;
- Be more efficient in your approach towards recruiters and better meet their needs;
- Find a (new) job.

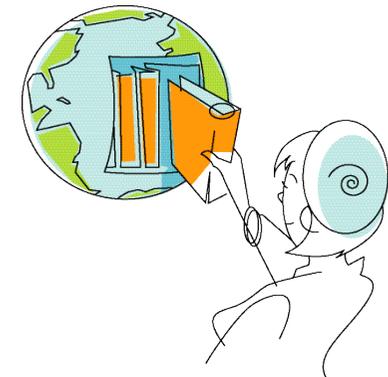

How to proceed ?

Succeeding in your international mobility project means asking yourself the right questions

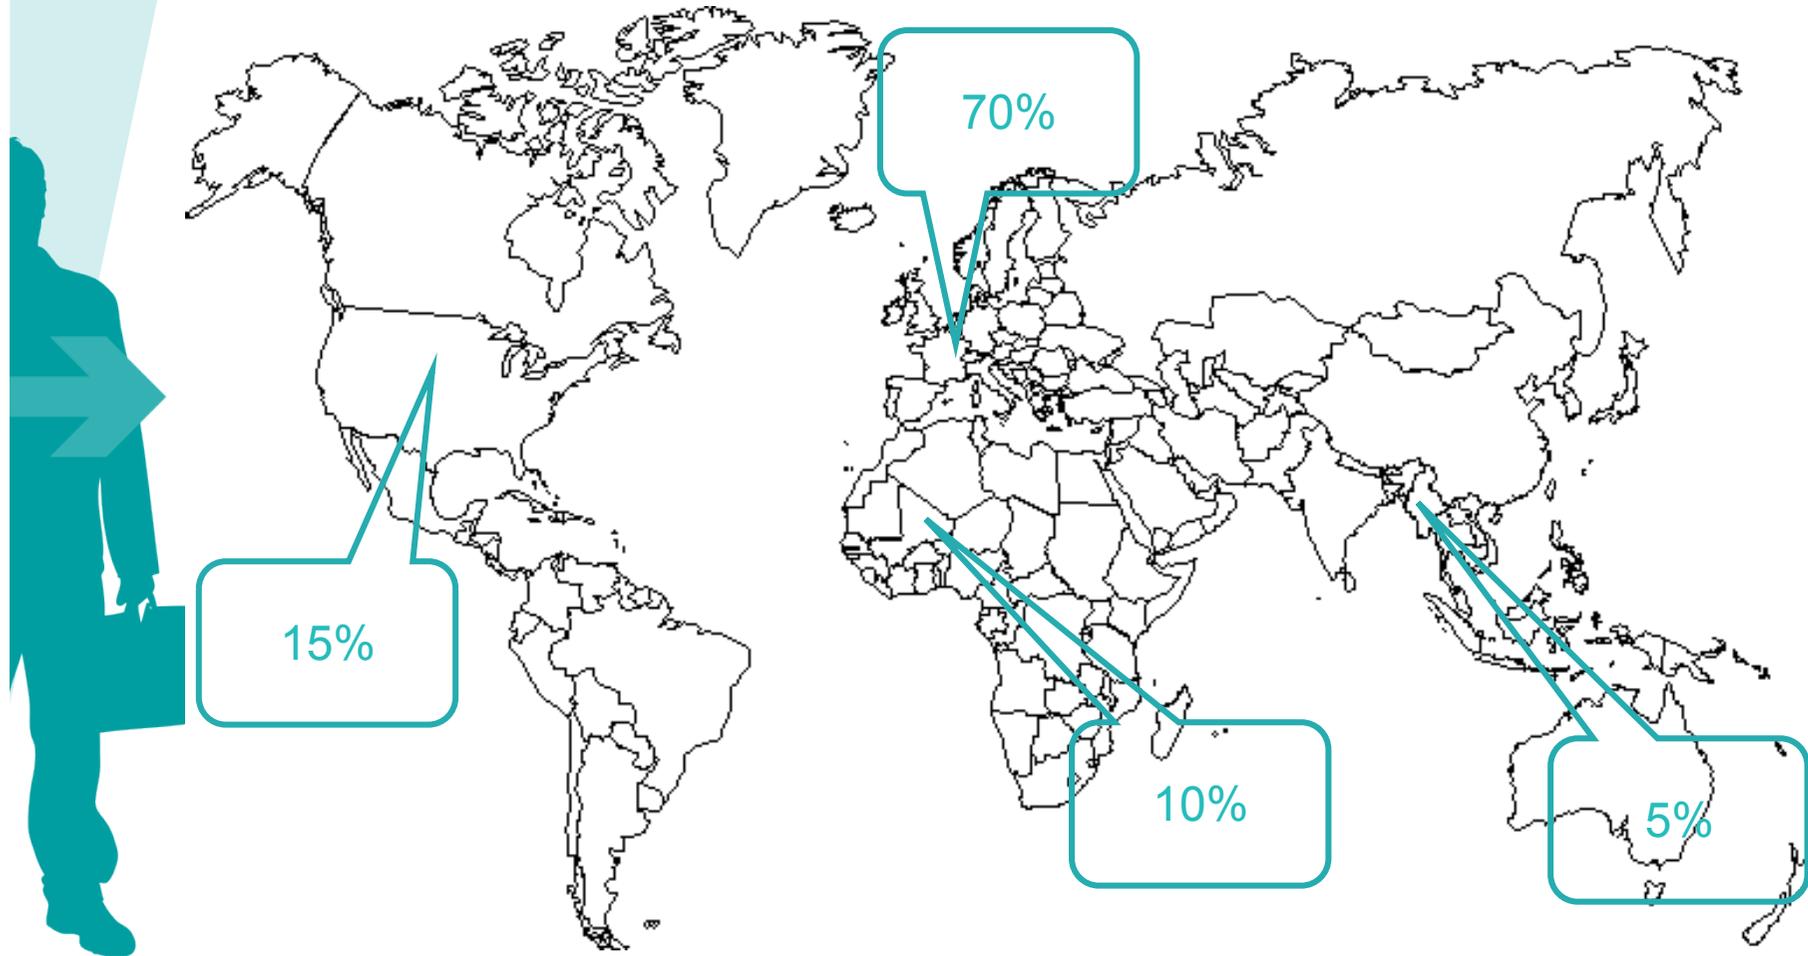

- Review your professional project, knowledge, knowhow's, motivations and expectations.
- Investigate on the chosen destination, the foreign labour market, the steps to be taken
- Assess the feasibility of your project on different aspects :
 - professional (regulated profession ?)
 - financial
 - family
- Anticipate your return

European mobility rules

The freedom of movement of workers within the European Union gives you the right to :

- Move freely in any other EU Member State ;
- Apply to job offers ;
- Stay for less than 3 months in another Member State, simply on the basis of a valid identity card or passport ;
- Remain on the territory after having been employed there.

What are your rights ?

Under community law, a Member State shall take into account all periods of insurance, employment or residence in other EU/EEA States as if they had been accomplished on its own territory.

This rule applies to :

- Sickness benefits
- Unemployment benefits
- Old age pensions

Your rights to unemployment insurance

Exporting unemployment benefits for a maximum period of 3 months under the following conditions :

Before leaving you must:

- have been registered as an unemployed jobseeker for at least 4 weeks
- apply for a U2 form - authorization to export your unemployment benefits - from your Pôle emploi agency

On arrival in the new country, you will need to:

- register as a jobseeker with the national employment service within 7 days from the date of your crossing off at Pôle emploi and submit your U2 form

When returning to France, it is possible to get the remaining unemployment benefits.
